of the week!

...is Nicole Wang

Nicole is a student at Cornerstone University. This is what she has to say about her life right now: "I am doing well. I just finished a J-term class at Cornerstone (J-term is to compress a one-semester long course into 2 weeks). It was quite intense to learn all the material, finish all the assignments and projects, and to prepare for mid-term and final exam. I am studying 'Psychology: Child and adolescent services' at Cornerstone. I will be doing some pre-internship this semester to have some hands-on experiences with what I might be doing in this field in the future. I will also be doing independent study of a sociology course this semester, along with three other courses that I am also taking. The most exciting thing that I am looking forward to is that I have a chance to go to Europe for a two-week study abroad trip this May. Some Cornerstone psychology professors, students and I will be going to Austria, Germany, The Netherlands, and England to visit some museums that are related to psychology, some famous psychologists' childhood home, and explore the European culture. I am starting to work on applying for my Europe visa, and hope the process will go well. I will greatly appreciate prayers for my studies and my upcoming trip."
